Arcibiskupské Gymnazium

March and April 2019

I wanted to spread my culture and also cooperate with local institutions, and this was the result of my two aims. After arranging a meeting with the Spanish teacher of Arcibiskupské Gymnazium, Katerina Kutalkova, I went to the high school to bring fresh information about Spanish and Basque traditions, dances, music, history and, of course, the language.

I even made them a test to check if they were paying attention to what I was saying, or if they could understand a native Spanish speaker. Fortunately they all approved the test! I hope I didn't make it very easy.

As it's known, the main point of learning is to be active, and not just listening what I can say. In order to be more productive on this way of learning we arranged one more meeting, this time for conversation. I tried to carry on a lesson where talking matters, more than talking perfectly. Because one of the biggest barrier to learn a language is to overcome the fear to talk it wrong.

First of all we made an introduction of ourselves, all in Spanish, developing the idea of which hobby are we interested in, and then, we played the game “Me gustas porque tienes...”. It's basically a game used in non-formal education where talking, overcoming fears (shame), and relationships are developed.

I liked a lot the way the involved in the activities and I think they learned something, as the same time they practiced the language. Czech students are great!
